Crisis of Leadership

When asked by one of his disciples about the ingredients of good government, Confucius answered: “‘Sufficient food, sufficient weapons, and the confidence of the common people.’

‘But,’ asked the disciple, ‘suppose you had no choice but to dispense with one of those three, which would you forego?’

‘Weapons,’ said Confucius.

‘His disciple persisted: ‘Suppose you were then forced to dispense with one of the two that are left, which would you forego?’

‘Replied Confucius, ‘Food. For from of old, hunger has been the lot of all men, but a people that no longer trusts its rulers is lost indeed.’”

People do, indeed, want strong, trustworthy leadership. When a soldier signed up for a second term of duty, he was asked why. “I tried civilian life,” he said, “but nobody is in charge out there.” This week we will look at Judah’s crisis of leadership and the sad results that followed.

The Week at a Glance: What spiritual dangers come with success? What prepared Isaiah for his ministry? How do we understand the idea that God “hardens” people’s hearts?

Memory Text: “In the year that King Uzziah died, I saw the Lord sitting on a throne, high and lofty; and the hem of his robe filled the temple” (Isaiah 6:1, NRSV).

The King Is Dead. Long Live the King!

Isaiah 6:1 talks about the death of King Uzziah. Read 2 Chronicles 26 and then answer this question: What is the significance of King Uzziah’s death?

Different perspectives can be given regarding the death of this king.

1. Although Uzziah’s reign was long and prosperous, “when he had become strong he grew proud, to his destruction” and attempted to offer incense in the temple (2 Chron. 26:16, NRSV). When the priests rightly stopped him because he was not authorized as a priestly descendant of Aaron (vs. 18), the king became angry. At this moment, when the king refused reproof, the Lord immediately struck him with leprosy, which he had “to the day of his death, and being leprous lived in a separate house, for he was excluded from the house of the Lord” (vs. 21, NRSV). How ironic that Isaiah saw a vision of the pure, immortal, divine King in His house/temple in the very year the impure human king died.

2. There is a striking contrast between Uzziah and Isaiah. Uzziah reached for holiness presumptuously, for the wrong reason (pride), and, instead, became ritually impure so that he was cut off from holiness. Isaiah, on the other hand, allowed God’s holiness to reach him. He humbly admitted his weakness and yearned for moral purity, which he received (Isa. 6:5-7, NRSV). Like the tax collector in Jesus’ parable, he went away justified: “ ‘For all who exalt themselves will be humbled, but all who humble themselves will be exalted.’ ” (Luke 18:14, NRSV).

3. There is a striking similarity between Uzziah’s leprous body and the moral condition of his people: “ . . . there is no soundness in it, but bruises and sores and bleeding wounds” (Isa. 1:6, NRSV).

4. The death of Uzziah in about 740 b.c. marks a major crisis in the leadership of God’s people. The death of any absolute ruler makes the country vulnerable during a transition of power. But Judah was in special danger, because Tiglath-pileser III had ascended the throne of Assyria a few years before, in 745 b.c., and immediately went on a warpath that made his nation an invincible superpower and threatened the independent existence of all nations in the Near East. In this time of crisis, God encouraged Isaiah by showing the prophet He was still in control.

Read carefully 2 Chronicles 26:16. In what ways does each one of us face that potential for the same thing? How can reflecting upon the Cross protect us from that pitfall?
COMMENTS

Key Text: Isaiah 6.

Teachers Aim:
1. To show God’s control in all things.
2. To examine a right response to God.

Lesson Outline:
I. God Is in Control (Isa. 6:1-4).
   A. At a time of uncertainty in the world around him, Isaiah is given a vision of a transcendent God.
   B. The death of Uzziah presented Judah with a crisis of leadership, ending a long period of peace and prosperity. With His people coming to rely too much on themselves and their human leaders, God presents a vision that reminds them He is in control.

II. Response to a Holy God (Isa. 6:5-13).
   A. Finding himself in the very presence of God, Isaiah immediately recognizes his own unworthiness. (Note the contrast between Isaiah’s response and Uzziah’s pride in burning incense in the temple.)
   B. Once purified, Isaiah responds willingly to God’s calling.
   C. All are given the opportunity to respond to God’s calling, but most will not.

Summary: Even in destruction, the Lord provides hope—indeed, amazing, condescending grace—in His assurance of the holy seed that will remain. When all around us seems hopeless, we can be sure that God is in control.

COMMENTARY

Introduction: Crisis of Leadership.
Though human greatness often fails, God’s greatness never does. His commission to Isaiah came while one of Judah’s best kings had died after marring his record in the latter days of his reign. God’s appearance to Isaiah in the temple affirmed that His purpose would triumph, regardless of the difficulties ahead.

I. A Fallen King.
King Uzziah’s presumption in attempting to take the office of the priesthood is a warning to all future leaders. God kept the office of priest and king separate, prohibiting the crossover that was so common in pagan cultures (see Num. 18:6, 7; 2 Chron. 26:16-21).

Uzziah’s ambition to burn incense in the sanctuary arose when his kingdom was at the height of its power. Success had fueled his “Holy, Holy, Holy” (Isa. 6:1-4).

Notice what was happening here in the first four verses of Isaiah 6. The king dies during great political turmoil (the Assyrians are on the warpath); it could have been, for Isaiah, a fearful time when he was not sure who was in control.

And then—what happens? While taken in vision, Isaiah gazes upon the blazing glory of God upon His throne, hears the antiphony of shining seraphim (“burning ones”) calling out the words “holy, holy, holy,” feels the resultant seismic shaking of the floor beneath him, and peers through swirling smoke as it fills the temple. It must have been a stunning experience for the prophet. Surely Isaiah now knows who is in control, despite outward events.

Where is the Lord in this vision (see Isa. 6:1)? Why would the Lord make an appearance to Isaiah here, as opposed to anywhere else? See Exod. 25:8, 40:34-38.

In Ezekiel 1; Daniel 7:9, 10; Revelation 4–5, the prophets Ezekiel, Daniel, and John are in exile when they receive their visions. Like Isaiah, they need special comfort and encouragement that God is still in charge, as their world is falling apart (Daniel and Ezekiel are captives in a pagan nation that had destroyed their own, and John is exiled to a lonely island by a hostile political power). No doubt, these visions helped give them what they needed in order to stay faithful, even during a crisis situation.

John’s description of God’s temple in heaven is especially close to what Isaiah saw. See Revelation 4:8, where four living creatures, each of which has six wings, also sing “Holy, holy, holy” (compare Isa. 6:2, 3).

All of us have been in discouraging situations, where from outward appearances all seemed lost. Even if you didn’t get a vision of the “glory of the Lord,” as did Isaiah, recount the ways in which the Lord was able to sustain you and your faith during this crisis. What have you learned from these experiences that you could share with others?
pride. “The cup most difficult to carry is not the cup that is empty, but the cup that is full to the brim. It is this that needs to be most carefully balanced. Affliction and adversity bring disappointment and sorrow; but it is prosperity that is most dangerous to spiritual life.”—Ellen G. White, The Ministry of Healing, p. 212.

Uzziah’s apostasy typified Judah’s national pride and loss of faith. This made them vulnerable to invasion from God’s enemies. Their greatest foe, however, was their own immorality, symbolized by the king’s leprosy.

II. The King of Glory.

After Uzziah’s death, Isaiah received a vision of the Redeemer-King in the throne room of the heavenly sanctuary. That scene shattered Isaiah’s own spiritual complacency.

“‘The vision given to Isaiah represents the condition of God’s people in the last days. They are privileged to see by faith the work that is going forward in the heavenly sanctuary. . . . As they look by faith into the holy of holies, and see the work of Christ in the heavenly sanctuary, they perceive that they are a people of unclean lips,—a people whose lips have often spoken vanity, and whose talents have not been sanctified and employed to the glory of God. Well may they despair as they contrast their own weakness and unworthiness with the purity and loveliness of the glorious character of Christ. But if they, like Isaiah, will receive the impression the Lord designs shall be made upon the heart, if they will humble their souls before God, there is hope for them. The bow of promise is above the throne, and the work done for Isaiah will be performed in them. God will respond to the petitions coming from the contrite heart.”—Ellen G. White, Review and Herald, Dec. 22, 1896.

Since Calvary, believers have an open invitation to enter into God’s presence in the sanctuary above (see Heb. 4:14-16, 10:19-23). When we do, we, like Isaiah, are flooded with a sense of God’s majesty, purity, and love. This will stir in us the same spirit of self-abasement that overcame Isaiah and John when God revealed Himself to them in the beauty of holiness from His sanctuary (compare Isa. 6:5-8 with Rev. 1:12-19). Both prophets experienced the death of self-importance and the cleansing, fervor, and power needed to fulfill God’s commission (see Exod. 3:1-10; Ps. 138:6; Ezekiel 1, 2; Dan. 10:1-12). God delights to dwell in the hearts of His servants, for only they are receptive to the fullness of His grace (see Ps. 34:18; 1 Pet. 5:5, 6).

III. A Purified and Empowered Prophet.

As a result of Isaiah’s response, a seraph touched his lips with a coal from the altar of incense, purging him of iniquity. “The live coal is symbolical of purification. If it touches the lips, no impure word will fall from them. The live coal also symbolizes the potency
New Personality (Isa. 6:5-7).

At the sanctuary/temple, only the high priest could approach the presence of God in the Holy of Holies on the Day of Atonement and with a protective smokescreen of incense, or he would die (Lev. 16:2, 12, 13). Isaiah saw the Lord, even though he was not the high priest, and, unlike Uzziah, he was not burning incense! The temple filled with smoke (Isa. 6:4), reminding us of the cloud in which God’s glory appeared on the Day of Atonement (Lev. 16:2). Awestruck and thinking he was finished (compare Exod. 33:20; Judg. 6:22, 23), Isaiah cried out with an acknowledgment of his sin and the sin of his people (Isa. 6:5), reminiscent of the high priest’s confession on the Day of Atonement (Lev. 16:21). Having experienced the worship of God from the lips of heavenly beings, Isaiah realized the inadequacy of worship offered by the lips of mortal, faulty human beings.

Why did the seraph use a live, or burning, coal from the altar to cleanse Isaiah’s lips? Isa 6:6, 7.

The seraph explained that through touching the prophet’s lips his guilt and sin were removed (vs. 7). The sin is not specified, but it need not be limited to wrong speech, because lips signify not only speech but also the entire person who utters it. Having received moral purification, Isaiah was now able to offer pure praise to God.

Fire is an agent of purification, because it burns away impurity (compare Num. 31:23). But the seraph used a coal from the special, holy fire of the altar, which God Himself had lighted and which was kept perpetually burning there (Lev. 6:12). So, the seraph made Isaiah holy, as well as pure. There is more. In worship at the sanctuary, or temple, the main reason for taking a coal from the altar was to light incense. Compare Leviticus 16:12, 13, where the high priest is to take a censer full of coals from the altar and use it to light incense. But in Isaiah 6, the seraph applies the coal to Isaiah, rather than to incense. Whereas Uzziah wanted to offer incense, Isaiah became like incense! Just as holy fire lights incense to fill God’s house with holy fragrance, it lights up the prophet to spread a holy message. It is no accident that in the next verses of Isaiah 6 (vss. 8 and following), God sends Isaiah out to His people.

Read prayerfully Isaiah’s response (vs. 5) to his vision of God. How do we see in it an expression of the basic problem of a sinful people existing in a universe created by a “‘Holy, holy, holy’” (vs. 3, NRSV) God? Why was Christ on the cross the only possible answer to this problem? What happened at the Cross that solved this problem? of the efforts of the servants of the Lord. God hates all coldness, all commonness, all cheap efforts. Those who labor acceptably in His cause, must be men who pray fervently, and whose works are wrought in God; and they will have an abundant entrance into the kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ, and their reward will be given them,—even eternal life.”—Ellen G. White Comments, The SDA Bible Commentary, vol. 4, p. 1141.

God filled Isaiah’s mind with a sense of His power and holiness, His hatred of sin and His judgments upon it, as well as the certainty that His purpose will triumph. This was to give the prophet courage and strength.

Then God asked: “Whom shall I send, and who will go for us?” (Isa. 6:8). Stripped of self-sufficiency, but filled with ardent love and loyalty to God, the prophet replied, “Here I am, send me” (vs. 8).

Inductive Bible Study

Texts for Discovery: Exodus 1–14, 2 Chronicles 26.

1. Being in a position of power and leadership is an awesome responsibility that comes with great temptations. Ask the class to cite examples, both biblical and modern, of people who were in positions of leadership but ended their reign in disgrace because of their presumptive or ego-driven behavior.

2. Leadership roles are numerous and varied and include the following: parents, classroom teachers, work supervisors, etc. As Christians, however, we are all leaders, because God has called us to share Him with both the world around us and the world far away from us. How has God saved you from the temptation to do wrong in your role as a Christian or in any other leadership position you hold? When temptation strikes what promise has He given us? See 1 Cor. 10:13. What can we learn from public leaders who failed or lost favor, because they abused their positions?

3. Compare the leadership, actions, downfall, and destruction of King Uzziah and Pharaoh. What was the state of their kingdoms as a result? Why is this an important lesson to us in our leadership positions? See Exodus 1–14, 2 Chronicles 26.

4. End the class with these questions to be answered silently by class members: As a leader, have you ever been approached by an “Isaiah” or a “Moses” with instructions and corrections from God? Did you take heed, or harden your heart? What was the result, based on how you handled the situation?
Royal Commission (Isa. 6:8).

“Also I heard the voice of the Lord, saying, Whom shall I send, and who will go for us? Then said I, Here am I; send me” (Isa. 6:8).

Having been purified, Isaiah immediately responded to God’s call for a representative whom He could send out on His behalf. In New Testament terms, Isaiah would have been called an apostle; that is, one who is sent.

Interestingly enough, the book of Isaiah does not begin, as do some other prophetic books, with the prophet describing his prophetic call (compare Jer. 1:4-10, Ezekiel 1–3). In other words, he must have already been called to be a prophet, even before the events of chapter 6. The Bible does show that a divine encounter can encourage a prophet even after the ministry began (Moses: Exodus 34; Elijah: 1 Kings 19). In contrast to other examples, too, God tells people they are to be prophets; in Isaiah 6, the prophet volunteers for a special mission. It appears that chapters 1–5 of Isaiah represent conditions at the time when Isaiah was first called, after which God jump-started his ministry by encouraging him at the temple and reconfirming his commission as God’s prophetic spokesman.

God encouraged Isaiah at His temple. Is there evidence elsewhere in the Bible that God’s sanctuary is a place of encouragement? Psalm 73 (see vs. 17), Heb. 4:14-16, 10:19-23, Revelation 5. What do these texts tell us?

Not only does God’s sanctuary throb with awesome power; it is a place where weak and faulty people such as ourselves can find refuge. We can be reassured by knowing that God is working to rescue us through Christ, our High Priest.

John also saw Christ represented as a sacrificial lamb that had just been slaughtered, its throat slit (Rev. 5:6). This was not a pretty sight. The description makes the point that although Christ was raised from the dead and has ascended to heaven, He continually carries the Cross event with Him. He is still lifted up in order to draw all people to Himself at His altar.

How have you found encouragement by entering God’s heavenly temple, by faith, in prayer? Hebrews 4:16 invites you to boldly approach God’s throne to “receive mercy and find grace to help in time of need” (NRSV). If someone were to ask you how you have found grace and mercy in your time of need, what would your response be?
Witnessing

We have heard the question, “Are leaders born or made?” Certainly, we could debate either side of the issue. But the point is that during a critical time, someone needs to assume leadership.

On September 11, 2001, the United States faced such a momentous time. Following an attack on New York and Washington, D.C., the nation waited to hear from its president. This man had won his position a short time earlier in a strongly contested election. This was his first crisis, one that many felt would define his presidency. Would he be able to reassure the nation and help to unite it? Could he look beyond the immediate situation by demonstrating visionary capabilities?

If at that moment, the president did emerge as a leader, history will determine the effectiveness and value of his leadership.

Our lesson reminds us that God gave the children of Israel a leader in Isaiah. God prepared him and sent him to give Israel an opportunity to reaffirm their covenant with God.

Centuries later, Jesus assumed the role of a servant leader—a Shepherd guiding His flock toward the heavenly kingdom. Two thousand years later, we are able to understand the value and sacrifice of His leadership, which assures us of our heavenly home if only we will accept Him.

Conscientiously practice servant leadership in the week ahead. Be willing to ask no more of others than you are willing to give or do yourself. No task is too small or too unimportant for you to undertake if you believe in the leadership model established by our Lord.

Lead by example, just like Jesus.
Appalling Appeal (Isa. 6:9-13).

When God recommissioned Isaiah, why did He give the prophet such a strange message to take to His people (Isa. 6:9, 10)?

God does not want any to perish (2 Pet. 3:9), which explains why He sent Isaiah to the people of Judah—and Jesus to the world. God’s desire is not to destroy but to save eternally. But while some people respond positively to His appeals, others become firmer in their resistance. Nevertheless, God keeps on appealing to them in order to give them more and more opportunities to repent. Yet, the more they resist, the harder they become. So in that sense, what God does to them results in the hardening of their hearts, even though He would rather that these actions soften them. God’s love toward us is unchanging; our individual response to His love is the crucial variable.

The role of a minister, such as Moses, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, or even Christ, is to keep on appealing, even if people reject the message. God said to Ezekiel: “Whether they hear or refuse to hear (for they are a rebellious house), they shall know that there has been a prophet among them” (Ezek. 2:5, NRSV). God’s role and that of His servants is to give people a fair choice, so that they will have adequate warning (compare Ezek. 3:16-21), even if they end up choosing destruction and exile (Isa. 6:11-13).

With these ideas in mind, how do we understand God’s role in hardening Pharaoh’s heart?

In Exodus 4:21, God says, “‘but I will harden his heart’” (NRSV). This is the first of nine times in which God said He would harden Pharaoh’s heart. But there were also nine times when Pharaoh hardened his own heart (for example, see Exod. 8:15, 32; 9:34).

Clearly Pharaoh possessed some kind of free will, or he would not have been able to harden his own heart. But the fact that God also hardened Pharaoh’s heart indicates that God initiated the circumstances to which Pharaoh reacted when he made his choices, choices to reject the signs God had given him. Had Pharaoh been open to those signs, his heart would have been softened, not hardened, by them.

Have you, in your own experience with the Lord, ever felt a hardening of your heart to the Holy Spirit? Think through what caused it. If you didn’t find that concept frightening then (after all, that’s part of what having a hard heart is all about), how do you view it now? What is the way of escape? See 1 Cor. 10:13.
Life-Application Approach

Icebreaker: Isaiah was to tell Israel that because they were no longer following His will or His teachings they were in danger of losing His protection and blessings. They were free to choose. But they needed to be reminded of the consequences for turning away from God.

Isaiah knew his message from God would not be received warmly. This frightened him. Would you have had the courage and faith to do what Isaiah did?

Thought Questions:
1. Read Psalm 3:1-3. How can we apply this prayer to our life and times? How does God act as a shield in your life?
2. Isaiah was given a vision of God’s majesty and holiness. If you were given the opportunity to view God’s inner glory, how would you imagine the scene? Describe what you think you would see. Share how you believe it would change your life.
3. Media today relentlessly bombard our senses. How, then, are we to describe heaven and the new earth so they are attractive to nonbelievers? Read Matthew 25:31. Discuss how we can help people long for this experience.

Application Questions:
1. Without the hope of the Second Coming, what would we have to look forward to? Ask various members of your class to express their thoughts.
2. Our lesson this week leads us to understand that God’s sanctuary is a place of hope and encouragement. In these difficult days, how important is it for God’s people to gather regularly in church to worship and to honor Him? When is it appropriate for individuals to worship with a few good friends in a more casual atmosphere?
3. Few are called to be prophets. But God asks all of us to work in His cause. What does that mean to you? How can you encourage others to work for Him?
Further Study: “Iniquitous practices had become so prevalent among all classes that the few who remained true to God were often tempted to lose heart and to give way to discouragement and despair. It seemed as if God’s purpose for Israel were about to fail and that the rebellious nation was to suffer a fate similar to that of Sodom and Gomorrah.

“In the face of such conditions it is not surprising that when, during the last year of Uzziah’s reign, Isaiah was called to bear to Judah God’s messages of warning and reproof, he shrank from the responsibility. He well knew that he would encounter obstinate resistance. As he realized his own inability to meet the situation and thought of the stubbornness and unbelief of the people for whom he was to labor, his task seemed hopeless. Should he in despair relinquish his mission and leave Judah undisturbed to their idolatry? Were the gods of Nineveh to rule the earth in defiance of the God of heaven?”—Ellen G. White, Prophets and Kings, pp. 306, 307.

Discussion Questions:

1. If a skeptic or an atheist were to challenge you with the question, “How can you show that your God is in charge?” what would you answer?

2. If God is in charge, why do innocent people suffer? Does Isaiah 1:19, 20 mean that in the present life only good things are supposed to happen to God’s faithful people and only bad things happen to those who rebel? Compare Job 1, 2; Psalm 37; Psalm 73. Can we reconcile our understanding of God’s character with the bad that happens to people? Do we need to?

3. In Isaiah 6, why are there so many connections to the Day of Atonement? Consider the fact that on this yearly judgment day, God purified His people by cleansing sin from loyal ones (Lev. 16:30) and purging out the disloyal (Lev. 23:29, 30).

Summary: At a time of national insecurity, when the weakness of human leadership was painfully obvious, Isaiah was given a grand vision of the supreme Leader of the universe. Petrified by inadequacy but purified and empowered by mercy, Isaiah was ready to go forth as God’s ambassador into a hostile world.
