The Wonder of His Works

SABBATH AFTERNOON

Memory Text: “When he saw the crowds, he had compassion on them, because they were harassed and helpless, like sheep without a shepherd” (Matthew 9:36, NIV).

Even the most cursory reading of the life of Jesus as presented in the Gospels reveals an interesting fact: With the exception of the amazing events surrounding His birth, very little of Jesus’ childhood and early years are recounted. This gap has led to all sorts of speculation through the centuries about what Christ had done during all those lost years. Nothing, though, comes close to what Ellen G. White wrote in The Desire of Ages (“As a Child”).

Instead, the Bible focuses on His adult life, specifically the three and a half years of His ministry. What a three and a half years they were!

The world has experienced nothing like it. His works, always for others, and completely without capriciousness, are presented as evidence of a new day dawning, the birth of the kingdom of God. The moment the Sermon on the Mount ended, the scene changed abruptly, with Jesus immediately plunging Himself into the needs of the people (see Matthew 8, 9). For Jesus it was not just words. He had the works to more than back up the words.

The kingdom of God had arrived, and Jesus was there to inaugurate it.

What Kind of Man Is This? (Matt. 8:25–27)

Read Matthew 8:1–4. What do you find significant about these verses in regard to the reasons for Jesus’ coming into the world?

The way Matthew tells it, the healing of the leper takes place as soon as Jesus comes down from the mountain. Fresh from delivering the Sermon on the Mount, Jesus runs smack into the furrow of human need in the valley. And the first challenge He confronts is leprosy, a symbol of our sinful human plight. Jesus touches the leper (what to make of that?), and the leprosy is gone! Such is the power of our Lord.

In what follows in the rest of Matthew 8 and in chapter 9, Matthew would depict Jesus as having power over nature: He calms the storm (Matt. 8:23–27); power over demons: He frees the demoniacs (vss. 28–33); power “over sickness, disease, and infirmity”: He heals the paralytic and the woman with a hemorrhage (vss. 1–9, 20–22); and power over death: He brings Jairus’s daughter back to life (vss. 18, 19, 23–26). Making it personal, Jesus has power over the storms of our lives, over the demons in our lives, and over the disorders (of whatever description) that plague us.

What lessons can we learn from Matthew 8:23–27?

In certain ancient mythologies, water was regarded as a foe that God overcomes. “To Israel, the raging, unruly waters symbolized the powers which are opposed to God’s sovereignty.”—The Interpreter’s Dictionary of the Bible (Nashville: Abingdon Press, 1962), vol. R–Z, p. 809. The reaction of Jesus’ disciples should be ours, as well: “What kind of man is this? Even the winds and the waves obey him!” (Matt. 8:27, NIV). In a way, their exclamation recalls a statement in the first chapter of Isaiah, where God calls heaven and earth to witness the rebellious determination of His people. “The ox knows his master, the donkey his owner’s manger, but Israel does not know, my people do not understand” (Isa. 1:3, NIV). Of all creation, His people are the only ones disloyal. So, here we may well ask whether we are the only entities of nature to stand in resistance to Jesus. The winds and the waves obey Him. What about us?
The Lesson in Brief

Key Text: Matthew 3:2

The Student Will:

Know: Discuss how the kingdom of heaven is as much a present reality as it is a future hope.
Feel: Sense a desire to experience the compassion of God daily.
Do: Share the message of God’s kingdom with others.

Learning Outline:

I. The Compassionate Christ

A. Jesus didn’t just simply speak words of comfort; He also ministered to the needs of others.
B. Many of the experiences of Christ—such as feeding the 5,000—give us a visual picture of why He came to the earth: to show humanity that He is able to provide for their every need, both physical and spiritual.
C. Jesus demonstrated His power over everything that concerns humanity.

II. Messiah

A. Jesus did not seek recognition or personal gain but lived His life for the benefit of others, showing that He came to save us.
B. John the Baptist and many other people were uncertain at first about Jesus being the true Messiah.
C. The words, actions, and miracles of Jesus revealed the fulfillment of the Messianic prophecies.

III. The Kingdom of God: For Now and Forever

In the life of Christ we are shown that the kingdom of God is both a present and a future reality.

Summary: The works of Jesus were evidence that He was truly the Messiah. But He did not come simply to speak of a future hope. He showed that God’s kingdom—filled with love and compassion, free from sin and suffering—could become a reality for every believer now.
The Sheer Marvel of It

It is not often that one pays attention to the paragraph headings in those modern versions of the Bible that have them. But one in Matthew 9 in the New International Version comes close to a comprehensive description of the wonder of Jesus’ works of healing, mercy, and power. “A Dead Girl and a Sick Woman,” it says. The words depict the challenge constantly confronting the Savior during His time with us; not the kind of challenge one could bluff one’s way through. Yet, Jesus confronted it all. That day, the dead girl came back to life, and the bleeding woman, after 12 years of misery, got a brand-new start.

Reflect on the following passages (or at least on as many as you are able). Do not write anything. Just simply be amazed by the sheer marvel of it all, at the wonderful Savior we have. Matt. 9:27–34; 12:22, 23; 14:25–31, 34–36; 15:29–31; 20:29–34; Mark 2:1–12; Luke 6:19.

To grasp the full power of these passages, one must take them slowly, trying to recapture their original setting. In Matthew 12:22, 23, for instance, the man brought to Jesus is both blind and mute. Close your eyes and put a finger over your lips for a while and try to imagine the condition of that unfortunate soul. In that state you do not know what is around you, and you cannot ask. But the man meets Jesus and leaves His holy presence with eyes wide open and with his tongue unsealed in praise!

Then how about Matthew 15:30, 31: “Great crowds came to him, bringing the lame, the blind, the crippled, the mute and many others, and laid them at his feet; and he healed them. The people were amazed when they saw the mute speaking, the crippled made well, the lame walking and the blind seeing. And they praised the God of Israel” (NIV).

It even got better. Matthew 14:34–36 and Luke 6:19 tell us that people pressed forward to touch the Savior “because power was coming from him and healing them all” (Luke 6:19, NIV).

Jesus promised that His followers will do greater things than He did. What does that mean? Why are we not seeing such marvels of healing and restoration today? Or, in some places, are we seeing it? How does the church’s healing ministry today compare with the example that Jesus set? How can you as an individual in modern times help continue Jesus’ healing ministry?
Learning Cycle

STEP 1—Motivate

Just for Teachers: “His name shall be called Wonderful,” prophe-sied Isaiah (9:6). Wonder and mystery mark the life and ministry of Jesus. His birth, death, resurrection, and ascension are wonders of cosmic proportion. His teachings are filled with wonder and defy all human understanding. This week we study the wonder of His works.

Of all the miracles Jesus performed, which is the most wonderful, and why?

After discussing the above question, read Matthew 11:4, 5. To the Baptist’s query whether He was the Messiah, Jesus sent back the response: Tell John that “The blind receive sight, the lame walk, those who have leprosy are cured, the deaf hear, the dead are raised, and the good news is preached to the poor’ ” (Matt. 11:5, NIV, italics supplied). Why does Jesus list “preaching the good news” along with miracles? Is it because the good news is the most wondrous of all miracles?

STEP 2—Explore

Just for Teachers: In Nazareth, Jesus announced His Messianic mission by quoting a passage from Isaiah and then affirming that He is the fulfillment of that prophecy. Read Luke 4:16–31 and let the class identify: (a) the power behind Jesus’ works; (b) the gospel and its relation to freedom and healing; (c) the meaning of the “year of the Lord.”

Bible Commentary

Jesus “went about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed of the devil” (Acts 10:38). From this verse we note three characteristics of the work of Jesus: His ministry was without frontiers; His ministry was the embodiment of righteousness; His ministry was one of deliverance.

I. A Ministry Without Boundaries

Jesus “went about” is how Peter describes the extensiveness of His ministry (Acts 10:38). Matthew also says: “Jesus went through all the towns and
The Motive Behind It (Matt. 4:23–25)

Back in the 1980s, undercover investigators conducted a sting operation on certain American televangelists. Noticing that these preachers would invite people to send in their personal prayer requests to the broadcast, with urgent appeals that they enclose a gift “to keep the program on the air,” the investigators wanted to know what happened to those donations and prayer requests. What they discovered shocked them. Staffers for the televangelists would go to the post office, collect the letters sent in by listeners, open them on the spot, fish out the donations, then dump the prayer requests right there in the post office trash bins.

In the key passage above, we read of Jesus traversing the entire area of Galilee, with huge crowds following Him from all across the region. And when Matthew returns to that same theme in chapter 9, he adds a critical dimension that forever distinguishes the motives of Jesus from that of these charlatans of the airwaves.

Read Matthew 9:35, 36. How does it describe the motive that propelled Jesus’ ministry?

The word compassion comes from a Greek word (splagchnon) that refers to “the inward parts,” “the bowels,” considered the seat of the emotions in the ancient world. Compassion goes beyond sympathy (which merely can be intellectual). Compassion comes from the inside, from the heart and even the very gut.

That is what Jesus had. For Him, grabbing people’s money and dumping their heartrending prayer requests into post office garbage bins would have been inconceivable. Again and again in the Gospels, the quality of compassion describes His attitude toward the people. A leper begs Him: “‘If you are willing, you can make me clean.’” Jesus, “filled with compassion,” reaches out to him: “‘I am willing. . . . Be clean!’” (Mark 1:40, 41, NIV; cf. Matt. 20:29–34, Mark 10:46–52).

If you can imagine someone doing all this with never a thought of personal gain, never a thought that what he is doing will be picked up by the press, or at least will look good on a résumé—with absolutely no thought of personal gain whatsoever—then you are thinking about Jesus. The single force that moved Him was love, love from the belly, love from the gut. The Gospels call it compassion. To what extent does compassion like this undergird your feelings and actions toward others?
villages” (Matt. 9:35, NIV). Christ’s ministry is not restricted to one locality or one people. He is the Lord of the universe, and He came “to seek and to save that which was lost” (Luke 19:10). The lost is the planet, and hence His mission is to Galilee, Judea, Samaria, and through His disciples to the ends of the world (Matt. 28:19, 20; Acts 1:8). He is the Lord of the universe and a Man with a message for all people. Hence, He or His message cannot be restricted to boundaries of any kind—be it geography, culture, caste, language, or tribe.

Consider This: The Adventist Church today has a global mission, with the aim of reaching every unreached community around the world. How does your life and witness fit into this worldwide mission?

II. A Ministry of Righteousness

“Jesus went about doing good.” He is good, and He can do nothing but good. But the good that Jesus did was considered so not because such good works met some human standards. What Jesus did was good because His good works were part of “the good news” of the kingdom of God that He established. His name, said the prophet, is “The LORD Our Righteousness” (Jer. 23:6), and in Jesus we have righteousness in all its fullness and power.

Ministry of compassion. One way the absolute goodness of Jesus is described in the Gospels is that He was moved with compassion wherever He saw human need—be it deep spiritual need (Matt. 9:36), hunger (Matt. 14:14, 15:32), leprosy (Mark 1:40, 41), blindness (Matt. 20:34), widowhood (Luke 7:12, 13), or demon possession (Mark 9:25). The Greek word for “compassion” is splagchna, which indicates no ordinary pity but the deepest emotion one is capable of, an emotion that arises from the very depths of one’s being. It suggests a passionate involvement with the other, like the love the father showed to the prodigal (Luke 15:20) and the compassion exhibited by the good Samaritan (Luke 10:33). Both parables use the word splagchna.
Sign of a New Day (Matt. 11:2–6)

From his prison cell, John the Baptist sent an urgent message to Jesus: “Are you the one who was to come, or should we expect someone else?” (Matt. 11:3, NIV). For the reader of the Gospels, it is a surprising and unexpected question. Was this not the same John who so confidently announced the Messiahship of Jesus at the Jordan (John 1:29–36)? And why would he raise the question precisely after he had “heard in prison what Christ was doing” (Matt. 11:2, NIV)? What is important for our study here, however, is Jesus’ response: “Go back and report to John what you hear and see: The blind receive sight, the lame walk, those who have leprosy are cured, the deaf hear, the dead are raised, and the good news is preached to the poor” (vss. 4, 5, NIV).

Jesus’ coded message to John was that His ministry was the sign of a new day dawning; the Messiah had, indeed, arrived. Surely in the back of Jesus’ mind as He spoke were the glorious Messianic prophecies in the book of Isaiah, among others.

Read Isaiah 29:18, 19; 35:5, 6; 61:1–3. How do these passages relate to Jesus’ ministry? Why do you think John and others were so slow to catch on?

The idea of Jesus’ ministry as a fulfillment of prophecy and the dawning of the Messianic age comes through clearly in Matthew’s own interpretation of events, in the way he anchors Jesus’ activities in the broader, Messianic context: “This was to fulfill what was spoken through the prophet Isaiah: ‘He took up our infirmities and carried our diseases’ ” (Matt. 8:17, NIV; citing Isa. 53:4). We see this same idea playing out in Matthew’s summary description of Jesus’ overall ministry: “Jesus went through all the towns and villages, teaching in their synagogues, preaching the good news of the kingdom and healing every disease and sickness. When he saw the crowds, he had compassion on them, because they were harassed and helpless, like sheep without a shepherd” (Matt. 9:35, 36, NIV; see also Matt. 4:23–25).

Looking back, we marvel at how John and others could have been so slow to see who Jesus was. Of course, hindsight is always very clear. What about us today? How might we be just as blind to what should be obvious truths? More important, how can we change?
Consider This: “Never are we to be cold and unsympathetic, especially when dealing with the poor. . . . Christ declared that the gospel is to be preached to the poor. Never does God’s truth put on an aspect of greater loveliness than when brought to the needy and destitute. Then it is that the light of the gospel shines forth in its most radiant clearness, lighting up the hut of the peasant and the rude cottage of the laborer. Angels of God are there, and their presence makes the crust of bread and the cup of water a banquet.”—Ellen G. White, Counsels on Stewardship, pp. 162, 163.

Compassion and unreserved love marked Jesus’ ministry of righteousness. He saw sheep without a shepherd, sickness without a physician, children without parents, people without dignity, the oppressed without a liberator, sinners without a Savior, and He did something about it. He was moved with compassion to render His ministry of righteousness.

III. A Ministry of Deliverance and Peace

Jesus healed “all that were oppressed of the devil” (Acts 10:38). To this testimony of Peter, add Jesus’ own self-understanding that He came “to set at liberty them that are bruised” (Luke 4:18), and we have a remarkable definition of what and why the work of Jesus is. Jesus traced the root of every problem in the world—be it fear, disease, loneliness, depression, disabilities, and death—to sin and its originator. Hence, to Him the ultimate healing and restoration rest in liberation from Satan’s clutches. The works Jesus did and the miracles He performed were but small illustrations of the big picture: God in Christ has invaded the dominion of Satan and established His kingdom of righteousness (Heb. 2:14, 1 John 5:8).

What is the oppression that you have or feel? Sinking in a storm-tossed sea (Matt. 8:23–27)? Possessed by demons of culture or abuse (vss. 28–32)? A life without hope (John 5:5–9)? Inability to proceed with normal life (Matt. 15:29–31)? A malady with malice (Matt. 8:1–4)? A loss of identity and acceptability (Mark 5:24–34)? Or grief and death (John 11:1–45)? Help is just a prayer away. Jesus liberates us from every Sign of the Final Restoration (Acts 3:19–21)

The marvelous healing of the demon-possessed man who was blind and mute, rather than bringing shouts of Hallelujahs from the Pharisees, brought instead a charge: “‘It is only by Beelzebub, the prince of demons, that this fellow drives out demons’” (Matt. 12:24, NIV). Thus was Jesus prompted to give an instructive explanation of the meaning of what was happening: “‘But if I drive out demons by the Spirit of God,’ He said, dismissing the Pharisees’ inference, ‘then the kingdom of God has come upon you’” (vs. 28).

The statement is important, since in the teaching of the Gospels, the kingdom of God is not only a present reality (as evident most directly in the above statement) but also a future reality (see Matt. 26:29, Luke 23:42, John 18:36).

What this means is that the works of Christ also look forward to the final restoration. When Jesus applied the pivotal prophecy of Isaiah to Himself during the reading of the scrolls in the synagogue at Nazareth (Luke 4:18, 19), He was proclaiming much more that would happen within the brief three and a half years of His own earthly ministry. “The year of the Lord’s favor,” harking back as it does to the ancient jubilee, was an announcement of the inauguration of the kingdom of God, beginning with the coming of the Messiah and reaching all the way down to the final consummation, when all prisoners will have been set free, all sight restored, all oppression removed, and when joy will pervade the entire cosmos.

The most powerful sign of the reign of sin is death. And the restoration of life by Jesus during His ministry pointed forward to that final day when death will be no more. “‘I am the Living One,’ ” says the resurrected Christ in John’s apocalyptic vision, “‘I was dead, and behold I am alive for ever . . . ! And I hold the keys of death and Hades’” (Rev. 1:18, NIV). Those whom Jesus restored to life during His ministry all succumbed to death again. But Jesus looked beyond that, to the final restoration, when “the trumpet will sound, [and] the dead will be raised imperishable” (1 Cor. 15:52, NIV).

How crucial is the hope of the resurrection? What do we have without it? What reasons do you have for trusting in God’s promise to one day destroy, forever, death?
oppression of the evil one. Through His work and message, “the kingdom of God has come” upon us (Matt. 12:28). Those who by faith enter that kingdom have freedom and peace (John 8:36, Rom. 5:1).

STEP 3—Practice

Just for Teachers: Most of the miracles that Jesus performed were to meet different human needs. In performing those miracles, Jesus often said, “Your faith has made you whole”; “Your sins are forgiven.” Probe this a little by discussing the following questions.

Thought Questions:

1. In what ways can sin be held accountable for human misery? Is it one’s personal sin or sin as a system that has affected the human race?

2. Can we consider lifestyle issues that affect our health as falling within the definition of sin?

3. What role does faith have in healing and restoration? Does faith mean “a will to live” or “a surrender to God”? What are some of the signs that one’s Christian life is governed by such a faith?

STEP 4—Apply

Just for Teachers: We learned this week that the greatest wonder of Jesus’ work is His establishment of His kingdom. We also are aware that this kingdom has two aspects: the kingdom of grace here and now and the kingdom of glory yet to come. Discuss with your class members their responsibility to both aspects of the kingdom.

Application Questions:

1. If indeed “‘the kingdom of God has come upon’” us (Matt. 12:28, NKJV), how do we ensure that the good news is made known to others, as well?

2. Christ is responsible for the establishment of both aspects of the kingdom. How would this truth affect your relationships in the church and the community?
Further Study: Examine the following statement. How does it relate to the overall lesson for this week? Do you see areas of tension? Or does it make the same general point in a different way? Here it is: “The Gospels are filled with accounts of Jesus’ miracles, but it would be a mistake to place our emphasis there. For one thing, Jesus did not himself emphasize them; almost all of them were performed quietly, apart from the crowd, and as demonstrations of the power of faith. We get a better perspective on Jesus’ activities if we place the emphasis where one of his disciples did. Once, in addressing a group, Peter found it necessary to epitomize Jesus’ life, and said, ‘He went about doing good.’ Moving easily and without affectation among ordinary people and social misfits, healing them, counseling them, Jesus went about doing good. He did so with such single-minded effectiveness, that those who were with him constantly found their estimate of him modulating to a new key. They found themselves thinking that if divine goodness were to manifest itself in human form, this is how it would behave.”—Huston Smith, The Illustrated World’s Religions, p. 210.

Discussion Questions:

1. Ellen G. White said that “the great work of the gospel is not to close with less manifestation of the power of God than marked its opening.” She spoke of a vigorous, worldwide thrust as the end approaches and said that “miracles will be wrought, the sick will be healed, and signs and wonders will follow the believers.”—The Great Controversy, pp. 611, 612. How do you see this prophecy coming to pass? How do you visualize your own participation in it? What role does your local church have in all this? What things can we do to prepare for this time?

2. Suppose someone appeared who did many amazing miracles, as did Jesus, miracles that testified to what was clearly supernatural. How could, should, you respond?

3. Bring to class your answer to Monday’s question about modern miracles and discuss your answers and the reasons for them.
