SABBATH AFTERNOON

Memory Text: “Above all, you must understand that no prophecy of Scripture came about by the prophet’s own interpretation. For prophecy never had its origin in the will of man, but men spoke from God as they were carried along by the Holy Spirit” (2 Peter 1:20, 21, NIV).

This week we will look at one of the strangest stories in the Old Testament. On first glance we discover a renegade king, a prophet who makes specific food prohibitions, an altar that splits open like a cracked egg, and then, more disturbing, a lying old prophet, and a selectively dangerous lion.

The story takes place in the first years of the divided monarchy, a time of political and religious tension. Under the leadership of Jeroboam (and with the express blessing of the Lord [1 Kings 11:29–39]), the ten tribes of Israel have separated themselves from Rehoboam, the son of Solomon and heir to the Davidic kingdom. War hangs in the air, and it is during this time of instability and change that God sends His prophet with a specific message to King Jeroboam about the idolatrous worship in the northern kingdom, which would prove ultimately to be its ruin.

Below the surface of this story about a nameless prophet lies the important issue of obedience and how seriously God takes our obedience. Whatever the unanswered questions, this story shows that any expression of the gospel without resulting obedience is, of necessity, a false gospel.

The Politics of Religion

After the death of Solomon, the poor judgment of Rehoboam, his son, led to the division of the nation, with King Jeroboam ruling in Israel, the northern kingdom, and Rehoboam in Judah, the southern kingdom (see 1 Kings 12).

Not long after the break, Jeroboam set the northern kingdom on a very dangerous path. He did not deliberately set out to lead Israel from a worship of God to idolatry; instead, he was acting from political expediency. He created two centers of worship, one at Bethel and one at Dan. He claimed to be trying to make things easier for the Israelites, so that they would not have to travel all the way to Jerusalem in order to worship. The golden calves were simply to be a visual reminder of God (not a representation) and were to make worship more credible for the common Israelite. What started as a political move, however, led to the breaking of the Ten Commandments (Exod. 20:4, 5).

What similarities can be noted between the golden calf episode in Exodus 32 and Jeroboam’s golden calves? See 1 Kings 12:25–33.

It is necessary to be innovative in worship and adapt worship to our specific cultural contexts, but we must be so careful. Even a small deviation from a clear command of God has far-reaching effects. In the case of Israel, the golden calves led the nation on a path toward blatant sin. But things did not stop there. Jeroboam was obliged to make other changes as well. He wanted to persuade some of the Levites, living within his borders, to serve as priests at his newly established shrines. However, they saw the dangers and were not prepared to contradict God’s commands; thus, Jeroboam was compelled to make priests of common people (1 Kings 12:31, 32), which in turn degraded the sacred office.

The story of Jeroboam’s religious-political changes should have served as a warning to the early Christian church; however, the same thing happened. Divine commandments were changed due to political or social influences. Sunday instead of Sabbath was now the new “holy” day, in order to distinguish the church from the Jews. The veneration of saints was introduced in order to make the worship of God more visual for heathen believers. The pressures that led to these changes are by no means limited to the time of Jeroboam or early Christianity. Today, as a church, we face many similar challenges.

What kinds of cultural pressure is your own church facing? How susceptible are you to cultural pressures around you? How willingly do you compromise on “little” things?
The Lesson in Brief

Key Text: 1 Kings 13:26

The Student Will:

Know: Compare and contrast actions of a man of God who prophesied so dramatically and resisted a corrupt king’s inducements but yet fell into deception so easily on the way home.

Feel: Sense how easy it is to slip from focused faith to lax disobedience.

Do: Resolve to daily seek God’s face and His protection from temptation.

Learning Outline:

I. Know: So Strong Yet So Weak

A  How could the man of God from Judah have acted so courageously and faithfully before the king and a large crowd yet slip into temptation so quickly afterward?

B  What were the immediate consequences for the man as a result of his disobedience to God?

C  Why did God punish him so decisively and quickly?

II. Feel: Darts of Temptation

A  What kinds of inducements to temptation did the man of God face in the guise of conflicting instructions from another man of God in Israel?

B  What temptations beset us to let our obedience to the Word of God slip?

III. Do: Shield of Faith

A  Because it is so easy to fall into temptation to disobey God, what is our only hope?

B  How can we find protection from deception and the strength to meet Satan’s wiles?

C  An older prophet gave the man of God instructions that conflicted with God’s original message. What can we learn from this situation about yielding our conscience to another’s when it goes against clear instruction from God?

Summary: The man of God from Judah prophesied faithfully and turned toward home, only to fall into the temptation to doubt God’s Word.
God’s Move

In the middle of Jeroboam’s political moves, God steps in and makes Himself heard. He speaks through a prophet from Judah. This unnamed prophet makes his appearance just as Jeroboam is standing before his altar at the dedication ceremony for the shrine. Anyone who was anybody in the kingdom of Israel would have been there. God selected the most opportune moment to act. The result is dramatic.

Read 1 Kings 13:1–6. What happens here? What immediate lessons come to mind from this narrative?

The prophet, though not named, is referred to as the man of God. This was a common title used for a person recognized as a messenger of God. It was used for Moses (Deut. 33:1) and Elijah (1 Kings 17:18). This title connects our nameless prophet with some of the great prophets of the Old Testament; thus, the reader’s expectations for him are high. The man of God cries out against Jeroboam’s altar and gives a prophecy. In the prophecy, a specific name, Josiah, is mentioned (1 Kings 13:2). This is amazing, because Josiah is born almost three centuries afterward. It reminds us of Cyrus, the Persian, whose name is mentioned by the prophet Isaiah about two hundred years before his birth (see Isa. 44:28, 45:1).

What are the main points of the message the man of God brings? First, the altar is illegal, and the man of God predicts that a descendant of David named Josiah will defile it. This is exactly what Jeroboam most fears. He is establishing these worship centers especially to avoid losing his kingdom to someone who sits on David’s throne. The second part of the message provides an immediate demonstration of God’s power, thus guaranteeing the prophecy’s future fulfillment. Before the eyes of everyone, the altar splits apart. Perhaps this is meant to remind the onlookers of the tablets of the Ten Commandments that Moses broke at the worship of the first golden calf.

It seems as if Jeroboam has learned nothing from history. He has two golden calves instead of one. And now instead of being repentant, Jeroboam points at the man of God. Pointing the hand, stick, or scepter has always been a sign of judgment in biblical times. Jeroboam wants to have him arrested. So much for surrendering to the will of God.

How, in this story, do we see the mercy of God presented, even to someone as stubborn as Jeroboam? How often do you find yourself expressing a similar attitude toward the clear leading of God? What have been the personal consequences of that attitude?
Learning Cycle

STEP 1—Motivate

Key Concept for Spiritual Growth: We must follow our conscience rather than depending on someone else to interpret God’s Word for us.

In popular parlance, obedience and conscientiousness are frequently confused with legalism. Those who desire intimate fellowship with God, expressing their devotion through heartfelt obedience, are sometimes parodied as rigid, legalistic, and somber souls, unacquainted with laughter and delight. Satan surely rejoices when such distortions prevail. True obedience is, in fact, the simplest expression of trust, which forms the foundation of every relationship. Failure in obedience, therefore, equals failure to believe (trust). Within marital relationships, respect and trust deteriorate long before courthouse papers are filed for divorce. Spiritually speaking, disrespect and distrust, leading to disobedience, form long before the dissolution of saving relationships. Those who diligently pursue intimacy with God understand obedience, not as shackles and fetters but as the liberating natural outgrowth of loving a Father we can trust.

Opening Activity: Governmental guidelines, regulations, advisories, and natural law form boundaries that enable us to live productively. Without these fences protecting our daily lives, chaos would engulf our existence. Discuss the following systems, analyzing how obedience enhances rather than restricts life: (1) traffic safety regulations (speed limits, traffic lights, lane designations, and so forth); (2) administration of prescription medications; (3) environmental protection (hazardous waste disposal, and so forth); and (4) criminal law (injunctions against murder, robbery, character defamation, computer fraud, and so forth).

Consider This: Considering the systems under discussion, how would life improve were these prohibitions and advisories removed? Alternatively, how would things deteriorate, even self-destruct, in their absence? When guidelines are followed (obedience)? How does that exhibit trust?

The Giver of Gifts

It is a spectacular miracle. Jeroboam’s hand, which had “dried up, so that he could not pull it in again” (1 Kings 13:4), is immediately restored. After such convincing evidence, we would expect at least a public confession from Jeroboam, the king. But miracles cannot change our will. Even after a dramatic intervention by God, it is surprisingly easy to find a “natural” explanation or just simply go back to our old habits.

What did Jesus say about the connection between miracles and belief? Luke 16:31, John 10:25–28, 15:24. Why do you think this is so true of us?

Instead of abandoning his worship activities and wholeheartedly beginning a reformation, Jeroboam simply changes tactics (see 1 Kings 13:7–10). He invites the man of God home with him and offers him a reward. This was a political move aimed at neutralizing the effect of the message on the people who witnessed the miracle. King Jeroboam is offering to take the man of God into his employ. Only the one who is in charge or who is soliciting a service is in a position to offer a reward, but God’s man is never to be on sale. He owes his allegiance to God and cannot let his messages from God be modified by whoever might be sponsoring him.

Read 2 Kings 5:14–16 and Daniel 5:13–17. How did the prophets respond to the offers of gifts?

Giving a gift places the giver in a position of power, and the receiver “owes” the giver. The man of God refuses the king’s gift and goes on to state that he will not eat or drink in the territory of Israel. By not accepting Jeroboam’s hospitality, the man of God says “No” to mixing true worship with idolatry. God’s people should not be for sale. They should walk a different route. The man of God did not have too far to walk, because the inauguration of the shrine at Bethel took place about 2 kilometers (1.4 miles) from the border with Judah. The next town in Judah’s territory was Mizpah, a 10-kilometer (7-mile) walk from Bethel. The man of God was to show how revolting the idolatrous system was to God through a dramatic object lesson of not eating and drinking and even by taking a different route home.

How is the giving of gifts or favors viewed in your culture? Are you indebted to anyone by gifts that you receive? Pray for God’s wisdom in helping you disentangle yourself from any compromising situations that you might find yourself in because of gifts given you.
obedience and trust, we now intensify our focus on the importance of individual conscience. How does a person know what to obey? How is God’s will discerned when there are conflicting voices that claim divine authority?

Bible Commentary

I. God’s Move (Review 1 Kings 13:1–6 with your class.)

Responding to the idolatry initiated by Jeroboam, God dispatches to the scene an unnamed prophet with messages of rebuke and correction. Risking his life, the prophet, known only as the man of God, faithfully delivers God’s message. Dedicated boldness obviously characterizes this unsung spokesperson. When Jeroboam aggressively threatens this messenger, his hand mysteriously shrivels, the altar cracks, signifying divine judgment, and God’s righteousness is vindicated. Centuries later, Judah’s final good king, Josiah, fulfilled the prophecy delivered by this unknown man of God, destroying Jeroboam’s abomination (2 Kings 23:15, 16).

Consider This: Should the story have ended here, what grade might you have assigned the prophet, and why? Which noble characteristics might we discern about him?

II. The Giver of Gifts (Review 1 Kings 13:7–10 with your class.)

Apparently overwhelmed by the divine display of judgment, Jeroboam retrenches. Rather than repenting, the renegade king attempts to achieve by guile something he could not otherwise attain. Balaam, generations before, had succumbed to the allure of financial enticements. Might this prophet likewise be seduced by avarice? The prophet, however, rebuffs Jeroboam’s attempts to compromise his integrity. This faithful messenger’s conscience cannot be auctioned off.

Consider This: Should the story have ended here, what grade might you have assigned the prophet, and why? Which characteristics, thus far revealed, should be emulated by believers in every generation?

III. Tempting Lies (Review 1 Kings 13:10–19 with your class.)

Triumph! Triumph! Triumph! Initially the unnamed prophet secures our Tempting Lies

God’s dramatic intervention at the inauguration ceremony gives the ordinary people plenty to talk about. Some young men go home and tell their father all about the man of God. The father’s name is not given, but we learn that he is old and that he is actually a prophet himself. This old prophet decides to go after the man of God and finds him sitting under a tree.

Read 1 Kings 13:11–19. Compare this passage with the first temptation and lie in Genesis 3:1–5. What similarities are there, and what can we learn from these episodes?

The man of God must have understood something of the urgency of his mission. He was told to give his message to the king and then not to take any time for eating or drinking but to return straight back. However, here he is, sitting under a tree in Israel, taking it easy. He could have walked the 2 kilometers (1.4 miles) and then could have sat under a tree in Judah. By losing his sense of urgency, the man of God was opening himself to temptation.

The old prophet deceives the man of God. We do not know what motivates the old prophet to deceive him. Whatever his motivation, the Bible tells us that “he lied” (1 Kings 13:18, NKJV). In this moment the old prophet becomes an agent of Satan, the father of lies (John 8:44). Perhaps an even more disturbing part of the story is that the man of God seems so easily taken in. After so obviously being led of God, after so obviously doing the Lord’s will, he just falls for the trick and goes directly against what God has told him to do.

It’s really hard to understand, isn’t it? We would like to excuse him for disobeying God, since he was led astray. But God never excuses belief in a lie when the lie is directly opposed to a clear command that He has given.

Temptation revolves around the choice to disobey God’s revealed will. Temptations don’t change as much as the forms of the temptations do. Hebrews 4:15 tells us that Jesus was tempted as we are. The same basic temptations we face (albeit in modern disguise) were faced and conquered by Jesus. Jesus promises us insight and a “way of escape” so that we would not be taken in by Satan’s lies (1 Cor. 10:13).

How easily do you allow temptations to lead you into direct conflict with God’s revealed will? What can you do, what choices can you make, to protect yourself from the temptations that so easily trap you?
admiration, facing down as he does the idolatrous king, who was surrounded by his adoring followers. The prophet sacrifices personal security for the uncertainties of faithful witness, eschewing personal financial aggrandizement in favor of unqualified, uncompromised commitment to God. Quite possibly he merits mention with Elijah and Samuel!

However, the narrative travels down new pathways from this point forward. Accosted by an elderly prophet, whose motives remain unexplained, the unnamed prophet retreats from his return journey for no apparent reason. Only two kilometers from Judah’s border and the safety of a completed mission (15–20 minutes of leisurely walking), he stops. The elderly prophet deceitfully claims he’s received divine messages that directly contradict those received by the unnamed prophet. Shockingly, after risking life itself based on the trustworthiness of the divine message and the Divine Message Giver, and after repulsing efforts to detain him based on the explicit directives of that message, the unnamed prophet yields his judgment based on “progressive revelations” supposedly given to another prophet with whom he is unacquainted.

Consider This: How do you grade the unnamed prophet now, and why? Will “progressive revelations” ever contradict earlier divine revelation? What perils await those who surrender their judgment to others in the interpretation of the divine revelation within Scripture? What is the standard by which all supposed new revelations must be judged?

IV. Twin Temptations (Review 1 Kings 13:20–33 with your class.)

The Bereans, of New Testament fame, refused simply to take Paul at his word, choosing rather to search the Scriptures for themselves in order to verify what Paul proclaimed (Acts 17:11). If only the unnamed prophet would have been so careful, how differently this story might have ended! Searching the Scriptures for ourselves, never surrendering our individual judgment to another on the basis of academic status or popular opinion—these are two safeguards against the perilous mistake in judgment that caused the death of one who once stood fearlessly for God.

Consider This: What habits must I adopt so that I am not tempted to surrender a correct understanding of the Scriptures to the judgment of others?
Twin Temptations

The man of God faced two temptations. The first, which he powerfully resisted, came from the king; the second, which he succumbed to, came from the old prophet. What important lesson can we take from this for ourselves? See 2 Tim. 4:3, 2 Pet. 2:1, Jude 4–16.

The greatest threat to our faith is not persecution from the outside by political powers but rather false prophets and teachers who come from within us or who claim to speak in God’s name.

It is important to have a clear word from the Lord. In other words, we need to study God’s Word, the Bible, for ourselves. A true prophet or teacher will not contradict other inspired revelation. Because God never contradicts Himself, any new prophecy or teaching from God will add to established truth and not subtract from it. It also will encourage obedience and never disobedience. Finally, we can judge prophets and teachers by the results of their teaching for their audience and in their own lives.

Read 1 Kings 13:20–34. What happens next, and what lessons are there for us?

What is hard to understand in all this is why the old prophet lies to the man of God to begin with. He starts out in the role of Satan, the deceiver, and then, before the chapter is over, he is the one delivering the “Thus saith the Lord” (vs. 21) to him. Although much is hard to understand, one thing in this story shouldn’t be: the man of God should not have so directly and blatantly disregarded the clear command of the Lord.

The death of the man of God is not without effect. Unlike the king, who witnessed a miracle and continued in his sin (see 1 Kings 13:33, 34), the old prophet believes that God’s Word will be fulfilled. He tells his sons that when he dies they are to lay his bones beside the bones of the man of God. The prophecy made by the man of God from Judah is literally fulfilled by Josiah three centuries later (2 Kings 23:15, 16). As prophesied, Josiah burns bones on the altar; however, he spares the bones of the man of God and also, consequentially, the bones of the old prophet who was buried with him (2 Kings 23:17, 18).

Look at this verse: “It is the man of God, who was disobedient unto the word of the Lord” (1 Kings 13:26). What ironic but important message can we take from this for ourselves?

STEP 3—Apply

Application Questions:

1. How do I maintain the integrity of my conscience regarding my understanding of Scripture and still live in active community with others who disagree with me? Must I compromise? How can those who disagree still bond spiritually?

2. Sarah and Myra room together at a prestigious Seventh-day Adventist university. Recently, Sarah has lost interest in her studies but finds ways to spend every spare moment with a mysterious group that claims to have discovered “new light.” She has become critical of the church, especially certain doctrines that she characterizes as “antiques.” Sarah is becoming more insistent that Myra should join her at these meetings. How should Myra handle the situation?

3. How should we approach claims of new revelations from God? By which standard are these to be evaluated? How can we be obedient to God’s truth and still maintain relationships with those who are not?

STEP 4—Create

Just for Teachers: Obedience to God’s call defines the depth of our trust in Him. That obedience cannot be based on another person’s trust in God or understanding of truth. We are held individually accountable; for our decisions cannot rely on another person’s faith. We cannot sustain life by merely watching another person eat, nor can spirituality be maintained by observing another person’s experience. The unnamed prophet had many admirable qualities, but his undoing came when he relied on the purported spiritual experience of another instead of obeying a clear and certain “Thus saith the Lord.”

Activity: Christ is our example. With the Christmas season upon us, there is even more reason to focus on Him. If the Christmas tree is a custom in your country, bring a small one to your classroom and decorate it with small ornaments to which scriptural passages will be attached. Passages should reflect the following emphases: (1) passages related to Jesus’ obedience, (2) passages regarding His unwillingness to compromise, (3) passages in which Jesus quotes or alludes to Scripture, and (4) passages that highlight Jesus’ trust in His Father.

Alternate option: Ask members to share and meditate on passages from Scripture that reflect the four areas of emphasis above. How do these passages help us to understand obedience and trust?
Further Study: “The Saviour overcame to show man how he may overcome. All the temptations of Satan, Christ met with the word of God. By trusting in God’s promises, He received power to obey God’s commandments, and the tempter could gain no advantage. To every temptation His answer was, ‘It is written.’ So God has given us His word wherewith to resist evil. Exceeding great and precious promises are ours, that by these we ‘might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust.’ 2 Peter 1:4.

“Bid the tempted one look not to circumstances, to the weakness of self, or to the power of temptation, but to the power of God’s word. All its strength is ours. ‘Thy word,’ says the psalmist, ‘have I hid in mine heart, that I might not sin against Thee.’ ‘By the word of Thy lips I have kept me from the paths of the destroyer.’ Psalms 119:11; 17:4.”—Ellen G. White, The Ministry of Healing, p. 181.

Discussion Questions:

1 Truth is progressive. As we better understand God’s truth, we may have to make changes in our lives, beliefs, organization, outreach, and so on. Keeping the status quo is not an option. Discuss in your class how we can know whether our proposed actions arise from God’s leading or society’s influence.

2 Discuss Jesus’ model of socializing with sinners as opposed to the duty of the man of God not to socialize and thus condone sin. How do we meet people where they are? Give practical examples in your Sabbath School class to show how you have come close to people and shown acceptance without encouraging sinful practices.

3 In many societies, the paying of bribes or giving of special gifts is part and parcel of almost all business, legal, and political deals. How can we, as Seventh-day Adventists, individually and as a church, survive in such societies? Based on this week’s lesson, as a class write some guidelines for dealing with this problem.

4 Imagine that someone in your church stands up and claims to have a message from the Lord or that your head elder claims to have new biblical light on last-day events. What would you do? How would you evaluate the claims?
